Eero Saarinen - Tulip Chair with red leather

Set of 4 / by Knoll International

details

With the one-legged Tulip chair Eero Saarinen developed in the 1950s for the company Knoll International the first chair with only one leg.
His goal was a flowing, slender form which tackled the "ugly and troubled world" Saarinen observed when looking at the visual chaos created by dining tables and chairs.
The project was subsequently taken to the next step when Saarinen developed the concept further for his dining table.
